That's correct. I had a couple of points re: t (b) (5) ACP

(b) (5) ACP that I will send you shortly if that would be helpful.

The 60 day withdrawal expires the end of the day today so the areas outside the original boundaries will be open to hardrock mining claims. I believe that is the only change for tomorrow. So I think it would be accurate to say the land removed from the original boundaries is open to hardrock mining claims.

The former monument area reverts back to multiple use management soon and the land that no longer falls within the monument boundary will be subject to mineral claims. I just want to confirm that it is inaccurate to say that the monuments will be open to mining and other extraction industries.

Is there anything else I should add? Fielding questions about mining in the area.
